People talk of memorials to him in statues of bronze or marble but they thus mock him and belie his message. What tribute should we pay to him that he would have appreciated ? He has shown us the way to live and to die. If we have truly understood Gandhiji's lesson, it would be better not to raise any memorial to him.

He was a Hindu and an Indian and he was proud of being a Hindu and an Indian. To him India was dear because she had represented throughout the ages certain immutable truths.

Though he was intensely religious and came to be called the Father of the Nation which he had liberated, yet no narrow religious or national, bond's confined his spirit. And so he became the great internationalist, believing in the essential unity of man, the underlying unity of all religions, and the needs of humanity, and more specially, devoted himself to the service of the poor, the distressed and the oppressed millions everywhere.

And this brings me to the point at which I asked, "What do we do with all the time which the machines have saved for us, and the new energy they have given us?" On the whole, it must be admitted, we do very little for the most part we use our time and energy to make more and better machines; but more and better machines only give us more time and more energy. What are we to do with them? The answer I think, is that we should try to become more civilized, For the machines themselves and the power which machines have given us, are not civilization but aids to civilization. Being civilized means making and liking beautiful things, thinking freely, and living rightly and maintaining justice equally between man and man. Man has a better chance today to do these things than he ever had before, he has more time, more energy, less to fear and less to fight against. If he will give his time and energy which his machines have won for him to making more and beautiful things, to finding out more and more about the universe to removing the causes of quarrels between nations, to discovering how to prevent poverty, then I think our civilization would undoubtedly be the greater, as it would be the most lasting that there has ever been. - C.E.M. JOAD

Educational qualification are considered to be very important in the modern world. They are essential for people who want to find reasonably well paid employment in the professions. For this reason most parents try to get their children to work hard at school and achieve academic success by doing well in exams. Many parental aspirations also include their children going to university and graduating with a good degree.

Not all children, however are capable of achieving academic success. This doesn't matter as long as parents are willing to accept it, but it is quite common for parents to think that all their children have to do is to study hard and they will pass their exams. All too often they just succeed in causing too much stress in their offspring, with the result that the children either get ill or fail exams that they might otherwise have passed.

There are some children who are quite bright but who are simply not interested in formal learning. Some might be of an artistic bent and wish to become an artist or designer, while some might have a talent for acting. Others may show an aptitude for working with their hands or want to start their own business and become entrepreneurs.

It is perfectly possible for children to achieve such ambitions. However, their parents may well have other ideas, which can lead to family conflict. Strangely enough, many parents are often reluctant to allow children to follow in their footsteps. For example actors may not wish their children to have a career in the theatre because of the uncertainty of the profession.

The opposite situation also arises. Parents who have worked hard to establish a business may want their children to become part of it only to find that their offspring prefer a completely different occupation.

On January 4, after 36 hrs of continuous pumping, we reached the last few centimeters of water. Now, we had only to keep pace with the water still coming in. We could not set any sail on the main mast. Pressure on the rigging would simply pull the damaged section of the hull apart, so we hoisted the, storm jib and headed for where I thought the two islands were. Mary found some corned beef and cracker biscuits, and we ate our first meal in almost two days.

When I went in to comfort the children, Jon asked, "Daddy, are we going to die ?" I tried to assure him that we could make. "But, Daddy, "he went on, "We aren't afraid of dying, if we can all be together-you and Mummy, Sue and I".

One cannot recall any movement in world history which has gripped the imagination of the entire human race so completely and so rapidly as the Green Movement which started nearly twenty five years ago. In 1972 the world's first nationwide Green party was founded in New Zealand. Since then, the movement has not looked back.

We have shifted - one hopes irrevocably - from the mechanistic view to a holistic and ecological view of the world. It is a shift in human perceptions as revolutionary as that introduced by Copernicus who taught mankind in the sixteenth century that the earth and the other planets revolved round the sun. For the first time in human history, there is a growing worldwide consciousness that the earth itself is a living organism - an enormous being of which we are parts. It has its own metabolic needs and vital processes which need to be respected and preserved.
